

Are you neurodivergent and affected by suicide?

We understand that being neurodivergent brings unique experiences, especially when dealing with loss. Our liaison workers are here to support you in a way that respects your communication style, sensory needs, and pace. Whether you need emotional support or help with practical matters, we are committed to making the process accessible and clear for you.

How we can help:

- Practical and emotional support with clear communication at every step.
- Liaising with police, coroners, and other services, simplifying complex processes.
- Guidance on how to manage media enquiries.
- Support in preparing for and attending an inquest.
- Connecting you with local support services, including those that are neurodivergent-friendly.
