

Having been diagnosed with prostate cancer five years ago I have, understandably, had to make more frequent visits to my doctor and have therefore found that having on-line access to my medical records has been invaluable.

I have been able to keep track of my medication history, order frequent repeat prescriptions, check on my various test results and provide this information to my consultant and specialist when requested.

I can, of course, also make appointments to see the doctor on-line when I need to plan ahead.
