

I recently attended a CT scan at Stockport hospital and was given a diagnosis by the specialist. When asking my GP on possible medication he stated that letters had not been sent. On checking the marvelous EMIS system, I could see that indeed the letters had not been sent. I could then contact Stockport hospital to request new letters to be sent and informed the hospital that I could check whether they had been sent. This enabled myself to improve on correspondence between the hospital and the GPs without burdening the GP practice for help. May I also say how easy it is to use and book repeat scripts and to make appointments. It simplifies things when there could be problems.
