Please note: The British Medical Council (BMA) discourages doctors from signing certificates which indicate that the patient will, for example, be fit for an activity due to medical-legal reasons. Even if a thorough history, examination and any necessary investigations are carried out, doctors are still not in a position to guarantee that a patient is fit for a particular activity. If they did agree they are not covered by the clinical negligence scheme for trusts or general practice. Consequently, the GP partnership at Appletree has agreed a policy not to undertake this private work.
